

Contributors

John K. T. CHAO, MA, LL.B, LL.M. (Cantab.), Ph.D. Law (Edin.) is professor of International Law and Diplomacy at the Department of Diplomacy of National Chengchi University in Taiwan and an adjunct professor of International Law at the Chinese University of Political Science and Law in China. He is also a member of the board of examiners at Examination Yuan in Taiwan. His publications cover a range of topics on international law including “Chinese Membership Problems at Asian Development Bank”, “On United Nations and Permanent Neutrality States”, among others.

Margareta GRIESZLER graduated in Chinese Studies, General Linguistics and History and received her PhD from the University of Vienna. Her research focus is on late Qing Dynasty (Empress Dowager Cixi), foreign relations of China, and discourse between East and West. Since 2003 she is a Research Fellow at the Department of East Asian Studies at the University of Vienna.

A. Tom GRUNFELD is SUNY distinguished teaching professor at Empire State/State University of New York. He is a historian who specializes in modern China, and Southeast Asia. He is the author of over 100 articles; book reviews and contributions to edited books as well as several on his own including “The Making of Modern Tibet”. He is currently a Fulbright Senior Specialist.

Judith HUFNAGEL studied Modern Chinese Studies, Economics, and Spanish Linguistics in Heidelberg and Shanghai, focusing on 20th century Chinese politics, cognitive and social linguistics (Spanish), and international economic policy (Economics). In 2004 she obtained her master’s degree for a thesis on international law in cross-strait relations. At present she is working in Munich as a researcher for an international design agency.

Donald A. JORDAN is a professor of East Asian History at Ohio University in Athens. He received his PhD from the University of Wisconsin. Jordan specializes in Sino-Japanese relations in Republican China and the career of T. V. Soong as a modernizer. Publications include: “The Northern Expedition: China’s National Revolution 1926–28” (University Press of Hawaii, 1976); “Chinese Boycotts versus Japanese Bombs; the Failure of China’s Revolutionary Diplomacy 1931–32” (University of Michigan Press, 1991); and “China’s Trial By Fire, the Shanghai War of 1932” (University of Michigan Press, 2001).

Nele NOESSELT, MA, is a doctoral candidate of Chinese Studies at the University of Vienna. Her Research interests include the modern Chinese state, China’s foreign policy and international relations.

Agnes SCHICK-CHEN is assistant professor at the Department of East Asian Studies at the University of Vienna. She writes on Chinese law, politics and society. Her book “Urheberrecht an der Taiwan-Strasse [Copyright at the Taiwan Straits]” was published in 2001, a book on the discourse on Chinese legal culture in the PRC after 1979 will follow in 2006.

WANG Dong is associate professor of history at Gordon College and research associate of the Fairbank Center for East Asian Research at Harvard University. At Gordon College, she also directs the East-West Institute of International Studies. She is the author of “China’s Unequal Treaties: Narrating National History” (Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, Inc., 2005). Her other English monograph on the cultural encounters between U.S. and China and Lingnan University (Canton Christian College) is under editorial consideration.

Susanne WEIGELIN-SCHWIEDRZIK is professor for Sinology at the Department of East Asian Studies at the University of Vienna. Her main field of research is modern Chinese history and historiography as well as Chinese politics. She was the organizer of the conference “As China meets the world – China’s changing position in the international community”, Vienna May, 2004).

XU Xiaoqun teaches history at Christopher Newport University in Virginia, USA and is the author of “Chinese Professionals and the Republican State: The Rise of Professional Associations in century China. Shanghai, 1912–1937” (Cambridge University Press, 2001) and numerous other articles. His research interest is in the institutional, social, and cultural history of twentieth-century China.