

Acknowledgments

The present work has grown out of a PhD dissertation written in the scope of a larger research project with the title Local Governance and Statehood in the Amu Darya Borderlands. The project ran from 2004 until 2010 at the Center of Development Research (ZEF) in Bonn, Germany, and was funded by the Volkswagen Foundation. The dissertation was submitted at the University of Bonn in autumn 2011 and defended in early 2012. My endeavor to gain an understanding of local politics and social order in eighteenth and nineteenth-century Transoxania has been shaped and guided by this project, but also embodies the fulfillment of some of my childhood dreams. I am grateful to the Volkswagen Foundation for its generous support of my research, which led me across the Oxus and the borders of three countries that could hardly be more different. I also thank the Gerda Henkel Foundation for the grant that enabled me to complete this dissertation.

I would like to thank my supervisors Stephan Conermann and Christine Noelle-Karimi for their readiness to accompany this study and their advice during all phases of my work. I particularly thank Conrad Schetter, who asked me to take part in the Amu Darya Project and was always approachable throughout my work. I am also grateful to my team colleagues Katja Mielke, Hafiz Boboyorov, Bernd Kuzmits and Henrik Poos. I have greatly benefitted from fruitful conceptual and theoretical discussions, especially with Katja and Conrad, and the academic climate within our small project group.

Anke von Kügelgen, Wolfgang Holzwarth, Jürgen Paul, Bakhtiyar Babajanov, Allen Frank, Ingeborg Baldauf, Philipp Reichmuth, Allen Frank, Satoru Kimura, Hedda Reindl-Kiel and Nigora Allaeva either directed me to relevant source materials or kindly shared their insights with me. Soraya Karimova's permission to give me unlimited access to the collection of manuscripts at the Al-Biruni Institute in Tashkent made my archival research successful. I am especially grateful to Philipp Reichmuth, Erna Malygin and the staff of the German embassy in Tashkent whose support opened the doors of Uzbekistan's Central Archive. I also thank Alisher Shaidullaev, who rendered invaluable assistance during my research stay in Uzbekistan and tirelessly helped me with looking into and ordering countless archival documents. Special thanks go to the personnel of the Central Archive of the Republic of Uzbekistan and the Al-Biruni Institute at Tashkent. I further wish to thank Robia Atoeva and Hafiz Boboyorov who helped me during my time in Dushanbe. Isa “the Kitobdor” of the Institute of Oriental Studies and Written Heritage responded to all my requests and offered me a place in his office where I could work. Although I decided to skip the Afghan part of my work and reserve it for a number of articles, I would like to thank all those who accompanied me in Afghanistan.

I am deeply indebted to my colleagues and friends at the Department of Islamic Studies at the University of Bonn who shared the lot of writing a PhD: Abdelkader Al Ghouz, Gül Şen, Awat Yaaqub Uthman, Rosa Tulyasheva, Elena Smolarz, Veruschka Wagner and Mehdi Sajid. To all of you I express my deep gratitude. I really enjoyed our time together and although we have all gone separate ways, my thoughts are always with you. I thank Lobna Jamal, Golli Ansari, Sepideh Jabbari Khameneh and Sarah Dusend for creating such a pleasant working environment. Kai Hessling kindly responded to all my book requests and helped order Russian secondary sources. Special thanks go to Mohammad Karimi Zanjani Asl and Malihe Karbassian for their readiness to share insights regarding Islamic manuscripts and their help in understanding complex textual passages and variant readings in some of the chronicles.

The final and crucial phase in the completion of this book would not have been possible without the support of my colleagues at the Institute of Oriental Studies at the University of Bamberg. I wish to thank all my colleagues and friends at the Department of Iranian Studies for providing such a congenial and supportive environment: Roswitha Braun, Mitra Sharifi-Neystanak, Roxane Haag-Higuchi and Birgitt Hoffmann. Not to forget Iga Seemann and Elisabeth Diethelm, I really enjoyed our short morning chats and cups of coffee! Christine Noelle-Karimi and Florian Schwarz at the Institute of Iranian Studies in Vienna kindly supported the process of preparing the final manuscript and also gave technical advice. Bettina Hofleitner supervised the final publication phase and compiled the maps. I am especially grateful to Sonia Dreiser, my English copy editor, for proofreading and tirelessly discussing detailed questions about style and choice of words. This book would not have been possible without her kind assistance. Finally, I would like to thank my wife, Mehrnoosh Entezari, for her support, encouragement and patience with me throughout the lengthy and often painful process of writing this book.
