

Contents

Abstract	iii
Preface and Acknowledgments	v
Introduction with a Fictional Scenario	1
In the Midst of Arnheim’s ‘Daily Paradise’	1
The Parameters Experience, Reality, Part-Whole and Meaning	7
The Roadmap	13
1 A Twofold Method for Ontology: Thinking and Perceiving	19
1.1 The Quaestio Facti and Quaestio Iuris of Meta-Ontology	19
1.2 The Deductive Method of Conceptual Ontology	25
1.3 The Inductive Method of Experimental Ontology	30
1.3.1 Ordinary Judgments and Natural Language	32
1.3.2 Empirical Experiments	35
1.4 Recapitulation of the Methodology	38
2 A Formal Ontology for PWO? Husserl’s 3rd Logical Investigation	40
2.1 Preliminary Remarks on Formal Ontology	40
2.2 Husserl’s 3 rd Logical Investigation	42
2.2.1 Formal and Material Ontology	44
2.2.2 Simple and Complex Wholes	46
2.2.3 Dependent Moments and Independent Pieces	47
2.2.4 Relative and Absolute (In)Dependency	50
2.2.5 Founded and Founding I: Towards a Flat Ontology of Pieces	52
2.2.6 Founded and Founding II: Towards a Vertical Ontology of Moments	55
2.2.7 Continuity and Discontinuity: The Possibility of PWO	61
2.3 Formal-Ontological Absence Yet Perceptual Presence	67
3 Two Alternative Lines of Argumentation	73
3.1 Material Composition and Mereology	73
3.1.1 Part-Whole Identity When Parts Undergo Change	78
3.1.2 Part-Whole Identity as Composition	79
3.1.3 Part-Whole Identity in Mereology	81
3.2 Husserl’s 4 th Logical Investigation	84
3.2.1 Une Grammaire Générale et Raisonnée	85
3.2.2 Towards Cognitive Linguistics	89
4 Cognitive Linguistics I: Meaning and Conceptual Metaphor	95
4.1 The Inchoateness of Linguistic Meaning and A Priori Reasoning	95
4.1.1 Propositional Meaning, Perceptual Meaning and Situational Meaning	98
4.1.2 No Meaningfulness Without a Mind/Body/World Unity	106

4.2	On Conceptual Metaphors	112
4.2.1	Primary Conceptual Metaphors	113
4.2.2	Complex Conceptual Metaphors	120
4.2.3	Across Domains: The Act of Metaphorical Mapping	123
4.2.4	Ontological Conceptual Metaphors: Is PWO One of Them?	130
5	Cognitive Linguistics II: Image Schemata and Conceptual Metonymy	139
5.1	On Image Schemata	139
5.1.1	What are Image Schemata? Some Questions and Answers	139
5.1.2	A Delineation of the PART-WHOLE Image Schema	151
5.2	On Conceptual Metonymy	165
5.2.1	Conceptual Metonymy as a Stand-For Relation	168
5.2.2	Conceptual Metonymy as Part-Whole Intra-Domain Mapping	170
5.2.3	Conceptual Metonymy as Co-Activation of Source and Target	176
5.2.4	From Metonymy to Synecdoche and Back Again	179
5.3	The Identification of PWO as Conceptual Metonymy	184
6	Gestalt Theory I: Part-Whole Dependency	192
6.1	Why and How to Approach Gestalt Theory	192
6.2	One-Sided Dependency I: Parts Found the Whole	200
6.2.1	Ehrenfels and Gestalt Qualities	201
6.2.2	Ontological Expansion of Gestalt Qualities	203
6.2.3	Vertical Ontology of Higher Order Gestalt Qualities	204
6.2.4	Good, Bad and No Infinity of Gestalt Qualities	206
6.3	One-Sided Dependency II: The Whole Found the Parts	209
6.3.1	From Additional Gestalt Qualities to Immediate Gestalt Wholes	209
6.3.2	Primacy of the Whole in Perceptual Grouping	215
6.3.3	The Meta-Principle of Prägnanz	219
6.4	From One-Sided to Two-Sided Part-Whole Dependency	223
7	Gestalt Theory II: Part-Whole Interdependency	229
7.1	Perceptual Meaning: B. Pinna	229
7.1.1	Meaning as Happening of the Parts to the Whole	230
7.1.2	Many Become Few, But Not One	235
7.2	Splitting and Merging: J. Koenderink	238
7.2.1	Visual Awareness and the Multiple-World Hypothesis	239
7.2.2	Complicacies in Pinpointing the Acts of Splitting and Merging	244
7.3	Part-Whole Emergence	248
7.3.1	Ontological Emergence, Hierarchies and Downward Causation	250
7.3.2	Emergence and Demergence	258
7.4	Multistability and Reversing Hierarchies	266
7.4.1	Ambiguous Figure-Ground Phenomena	266
7.4.2	Rethinking Multistability: Towards an Interactive Realism	273
	Conclusion: The Determination of PWO's Ontological Nature	288
	Table of Figures	304
	Bibliography	305