

Table of Contents

Editorial	7
Experimental Restoration and Reconstruction in Music Archaeology Fāng Jiànjūn 方建军	9
Reflections on Archaeomusicological Practice in South America José Pérez de Arce	21
Different Blowing Techniques for Palaeolithic Aerophones: Animal Calls, Clarinets, and Flutes Michael Praxmarer	39
On Experimental Reconstructions of the Mammoth Ivory Flute from Geißenklösterle Cave (GK3) and Other Palaeolithic Wind Instruments from South-West Germany Anna Friederike Potengowski, Gabriele Dalferth, Wulf Hein, Barbara Spreer, Hannes Wiedmann, Maria Malina, Susanne C. Münzel	59
Sounds from a Base Camp. Different Ways of Reconstructing and Playing the ‘Grubgraben’ Wind Instrument Maria Hackl, Veronika Kaudela, Bernardette Käfer	103
Only Pottery Drums in the Stone Age? Advantages and Disadvantages of Wooden versus Pottery Drums Relating to Production and Sound Luboš Chroustovský	125
Metallic Idiophones 800 BCE–800 CE in Central Europe: Function and Acoustic Influence – A Progress Report Beate Maria Pomberger, Jörg Mühlhans, Kayleigh Saunderson	143
Some Notes on Woodwind Instruments in al-Fārābī’s Kitāb al Mūsīqī al kabīr Yasemin Gökpınar	185
Kakui’s Hakase-Shi-Kuden-no-Koto in Modern English Translation: A Window into the Workings of Thirteenth-Century Japanese Buddhist Neumes and a Step Forward for Comparative Liturgy Stephen Ithel Duran	201
Pre-Columbian Maya Valveless Tube Trumpets Mark Howell	233
The ‘talempong batu’ Lithophone of Talang Anau (West Sumatra) and its Astonishing Tuning System Christoph Louven	249